Hall McFarland examines the themes and variations evolving from the classic Gaston Leroux novel. Dear Diary: Not bad. Welcome to Guthrie, where, lately, a lot of severed heads have been turning up.

Basketcase: just gross, but in a weird and fun way. Maybe the everyday citizen. A mysterious email he receives churns up the past, forcing him to return to Black Ridge, Washington and confront the dark practices of the founding family. I feel like I'm reading something a 15 year old wrote. Alas, Sideshow with its seven stories and three comic strips, has a minimal amount of dark fiction, with one strong story about tortured bread starter really by Cecil Castellucci. The Jones is reprinted. I didn't enjoy the second story either which was a short creepy piece told in second person as. Theresa Dillon did a great job on this anthology because all of the stories are very good.
