The historical lore was that JFK, in his first faltering words of German, was wrong to use the indefinite article "ein" and should have said "Ich bin Berliner" to declare his solidarity with the embattled Cold War city. Don't use "I'm down for that" unless it's contextually clear that there actually is a list, schedule or database where people's names are being written DOWN where you have to sign UP for a reservation, like in school for a future class, lecture.
