My question is which comes. If you want to cut through the billions of blogs that are out there, you need to develop some pretty meaningful relationships with bloggers in your niche that have authority. This is directly linked to the fact that I was not that active on social media and other blogs the past few months. Thanks again! I appreciate your hearing me. So today I wanted to share a few anecdotes from my first year of blogging. Learn whatever you can, wherever you can, and no matter how many obstacles you face, try to connect with the right people. What email would I use? The key to discipline is to become a creature of habit. What's difficult for all of us in the personal finance blogging space is to provide unique content. It gets tiresome after awhile.
