QUESTION: When a heavy object is set in contact with a surface, does the pressure from its presence continually heat up the area it is in contact with and the surface continually conduct that heat away or does the pressure from the object's weight come to thermal equilibrium? Of this the Psalmist says: "Thou hast made the spirit of man as a flame of fire. Also, pray this Psalm each time that you are present in church, and you will obtain a blessing.

In fact, his birth has always been shrouded in mystery. Psalm 8. With the twirl of my tongue I encompass worlds and volumes of worlds.
